The artistic world, the art market

Sarah: Are you an art lover Wentworth?

W: Yes, definitely. Actually my grandfather was a noted art collector in his youth.

Sarah: really? Was he an artist himself?

W: Well, he studied in an art college and was very skilled in drawing and engraving. But he quickly realised that he's rather help up-and-coming artists to exhibit their works. So he created an art gallery in the 50's. He actually promoted and did patronage for a few contemporary artists who became quite famous afterwards. He was really talented to value an artwork becoming a masterpiece.

Sarah: It's more than talent here, it's being gifted! I am amazed to hear that! I wanted to offer you to join me to a young artist's preview on Friday, but I guess you'd rather go to an auction right?

W: Not at all! I'd be glad to discover a new artist, is he a friend of yours?

Sarah: yes, and he's very good in his style. He's doing sculpture and modelling.

W: Well, that promises to be very interesting. Moreover my wife was working for an art dealer in Canada, do you mind if I bring her with me?

Sarah: not at all, "the more, the merrier" as it is said!
