Grammar: NEITHER ... phrases

1/ NEITHER ... NOR

In English, we use NEITHER...NOR... to connect two negative alternatives or more.

Example: I like neither tea nor coffee

= I don't like tea and coffee

= I like neither of them = I like neither of the two

2/ NOT... NOT EITHER

a) 2 actions

An equivalent to NEITHER... NOR is NOT...NOT EITHER. It is less formal but very frequent.

Example: I don't like tea and I don't like coffee either

= I don't like tea and coffee

b) 2 people

Another use can include two different subjects who have in common a negative statement.

If the auxiliary is in negative form, we use either after. The pattern is: auxiliary+ NOT + EITHER

Example: 'I don't like tea, Nicola doesn't either'

= 'I don't like tea and Nicola doesn't like tea'

If the auxiliary is in positive form, we use a different order: NEITHER + auxiliary + subject

Example: 'I don't like tea, neither does Nicolas'

= 'I don't like tea and Nicola doesn't like tea'

Other example with a modal: 'I can't drive. Neither can Sam. Nor can Sylvia'

= I can't drive. Sam can't drive. Sylvia can't drive'

NEITHER HIM NOR HER

Sarah: I don't understand them. I mean both are of an elusive nature.

Wentworth: Who are you referring to?

Sarah: I'm referring to Mark and Mary. I understand neither him nor her.

Wentworth: Why do you say that?

Sarah: Last week, they came and asked several questions. I answered and they didn't seem satisfied. I wonder if they understood my answers, or if they acted as if they understood. I suspect they didn't mean to bother me more so they didn't solicit me nor tried to clarify what they had already heard.

Wentworth: What makes you say that?

Sarah: We were supposed to work together for a project but they have undoubtedly a misconception concerning my role in our group

Wentworth: Can you elaborate?

Sarah: I decided to call them as I didn't hear from them for 3 days. Both of them didn't attend my call. Assuming they weren't available at that moment, I tried to call them back later at 6pm then 7pm and one last time around 8pm. I also made the assumption that they might be working or exercising even sleeping, I was positive that, the very next day, they would reach me ...But neither of them sent me a message or dialed my number. We are supposed to work together and exchange ideas but we have no interaction whatsoever. I don't mean to harass them or sound annoyed or annoying. I presume I'll have to do it on my own now.

Wentworth: If it is a group project, theoretically you three must collaborate because the three of you are equally in charge and responsible for it. You need to speak out, and sort things out. As you said, there must be some misunderstanding. You need to clear it and quickly. Cheer up!

Sarah: Thanks. Have a nice afternoon!
