Dialogue:

W: Good morning Sarah, how are you today?

Sarah: Hello Wentworth. Not so well unfortunately. I wish I could shake off this cold; I've had it for days!

W: are you sure it's only a cold? What are the symptoms?

Sarah: well no, but the symptoms are really similar to a cold because I am sniffing, sneezing, coughing, and I have this terrible headache.

W: Do you have fever?

Sarah: I don't know but I shiver a lot, and at the same time I sweat...

W: oh, it looks like you are feverish then. What else do you feel? Sore throat?

Sarah: well, my head is so stuffed I'm not sure I can hold a thought, and all my body hurts.

W: Poor you, you definitely look sick. Have you heard that our city is largely affected by a flu epidemic at the moment? It's spreading very quickly through the schools.

Sarah: Oh my God, no, I ignored it. Do you think I might have the flu? I actually feel very weak and unfit. I thought it was partly because of my diabetes. I guess I should consult a physician.

W: In my opinion you shouldn't wait to do so Sarah, you seem to be in pain. I can take you there if you want, you are unable to drive.

Sarah: Thanks Wentworth, I appreciate, but be careful, I might be contagious.
